Bishop Alexander's book is well-written, helpful, and an enjoyable read. As a priest in the church, this is a great resource for me to use not only as a refresher for my own personal prayer life but also for a group study on liturgical time. The Daily Office services of Morning and Evening Prayer (not to mention the Noonday and Compline services) are some of the most beautiful, holy parts of the Book of Common Prayer but they can be incredibly complicated for those new to the Anglican tradition. Bishop Alexander's book is a great way to begin to understand not only how to say those offices but why we say the things that we say in the various services. This is great book for someone with theological training or for someone just discovering the liturgical calendar and seasons.
