What a great book! This is definitely the best book I've seen on creative and Christian ideas to involve your family, friends and neighbors! Each holiday is listed with fun family traditions and ideas to involve your family and friends. What a perfect way to bring your family close together!

I'm not a big Gaither fan but when my kids were little I read this book and got all kinds of good ideas. For example, we interviewed our kids on tape every birthday. Now that they are teenagers, these tapes are a real treasure. I highly recommend this book for young families who want to start some cherished family traditions.

This book has some really nice, simple, and thoughtful ideas of how to "make memories" with your children. They range from making birthday flags for every family member to considerate things that you might do for a sick neighbor. Although I think it would be great if they added real pictures to exemplify various craft projects and recipes, they have some very useful ideas. One of my favorites is the "Red Birthday Cake" recipe under the birthday section. This cake is DELICIOUS!!! My husband, who doesn't get super excited about sweets, really liked it, too! That says something in my books. :) All in all, it's a nice book to have, but it does not contain very useful pictures (rather it has simple sketches).

This book helped me make family memories that will last a lifetime. They give practical suggestions you can use and build upon. They include some of their personal testimony and share how they built memories with their families.

Excellent family book which I gave as a gift to an expectant mom. This book should be republished as it's the kind of book people need in this difficult time we are all going through. I have given it several times to new parents or at baby showers. Georgiann

This has great ideas, scripture reference and loads of ideas for parents to lead activities with young children. The book seems a bit dated but it's filled with a wealth of ideas. Maybe a modern version of this book needs to be published with pictures of actual products or in color. All in all, it's a fair book.

"Let's Make a Memory" is an old favorite. Many wonderful ideas that are easy to do or will inspire you to come up with your own ideas.

I bought this book 28 years ago when both of my children were small. I loved it and am now giving one to my daughter and her baby. I know she will enjoy it as much as I did.
